

Tests reveal serious differences in quality

Time and again you are offered parts from competitors that in part do not even meet the regular standards. More often than not, however, they do not even meet the high quality demands from Volkswagen. Despite this, these parts are still offered as comparable in terms of quality.

We have drawn your attention to some of these offers. We have had these parts checked by independent test institutes. And with them the relevant Volkswagen Genuine Parts®.

The individual test criteria were prescribed by the respective institutes and the tests carried out in accordance with internationally recognised testing regulations. These tests have shown that individual non-company parts do not meet the quality demands from Volkswagen. At the same time we have made it evident what consequences are possible from using these parts. To make this information available to you, the following information documents the main results of these tests.

The documented tests are not representative tests. The results published here refer exclusively to the products named as follows and not to other products that are also available on the market.

“Revealing results”

Marc Arnholz
Product management, brakes, wheels and
tyres, shock absorbers

The documented test results are revealing both for you in the trade and also for your customers. It has been clearly proven with the tests that there are considerable differences in quality among the products examined.